

Overdose of Opioids with Xylazine

Restored breathing, NOT wakefulness, is the most important sign to look for when responding to a xylazine involved overdose.

How To: Rescue Breathing

- 1) Put the person flat on their back.
- 2) Tilt the chin back, ensuring the airway is clear. If not, clear using two fingers as a hook.
- 3) Pinch their nose and place your mouth over theirs, giving two steady breaths.
- 4) Continue with one breath every 5 seconds.

How To: Recovery Position

- 1) Start with the person flat on their back, keeping the left arm and leg straight.
- 2) Bend their right leg and roll them onto their left side.
- 3) Place their head on the left arm and bend the right arm in front to keep them from rolling over.
